

A STYLE SHOW IS TALKED OF HERE FOR NEXT MONTH

Considered by Local Merchants at a Meeting Here Last Night.

ALL ARE IN FAVOR OF IT

The purpose is to show to the public the complete up-to-date of the goods carried by the business men of Connellsville.

A number of prominent merchants of Connellsville met last evening in the Wright-Meteler store to discuss and take action on a proposed Connellsville Style Show, which, if the project should be successfully carried out, will probably be held October 9, 10 and 11. These dates were discussed, but no definite action was taken. A. W. Wright was elected chairman of the meeting, and the following committee were appointed: Elmer E. F. Graham, E. C. Moore and M. F. Feldstein, advertising; J. W. Horner, Harry Dunn and A. J. Kobacker. These committees, in addition to their work will visit the merchants who were not present last evening, and ask them to join in the movement. Merchants who were unable to attend last night had discussed the style show at different times, and were heartily in favor of the movement.

The object of the style show is to make it clear to the people of this and surrounding towns that the merchants of Connellsville can supply them with complete merchandise stock at as low prices as the larger cities, even though they are not in a position to handle as large a variety. If the style show should be held, all stores will hold their opening on the same day, instead of each store having a different date for its opening.

There is not a merchant in Connellsville who will not be in a position to engage in the movement, as there are always new ideas being introduced in all lines of business. The style show will be entirely different from business day. No special bargains will be on sale; but, instead, every merchant will make a special effort to have on display the most up-to-date in his establishment, competing in quality and style with the best stores of the larger cities.

Since every merchant on hand was heartily in favor of the show, there is little doubt as to its being held. Connellsville is noted for its fine stores, and if the style show is carried through the people of this city and vicinity will be given an opportunity to witness one of the most elaborate displays of merchandise ever exhibited here. Style shows are held in larger cities and have met with great success as they give shoppers the correct idea of quality, assortment and style of goods handled.

The conference adjourned about 10 o'clock. At a meeting to be held soon the committee will submit their report, and further arrangements be made.

DIPLOMAT WHEELER IS CALLED HOME FROM ROME

Charges Said to Have Been Made That He Has Utilized a Courtesy to Make Money.

By United Press.

ROME, Sept. 12.—Post Wheeler of New York, first secretary of the United States embassy, has been summoned to Washington by the State Department to explain charges that have been made against him. Mr. Wheeler and Ambassador Ogden refused to comment on the summons.

A rumor current here is to the effect that a prominent American preferred the charges with Secretary of State Bryan. It is said they consist of allegations that Wheeler violated his privilege of importing goods into Italy duty free. The Italian government permits all foreign diplomats to import their possessions without paying duty. Wheeler is said to have used this privilege for his own profit, importing articles that were later disposed of.

Wheeler's wife is Hattie Fernette Rhee, the well-known writer. Wheeler has been in the diplomatic service for five years.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—While admitting that charges have been preferred against Post Wheeler, officials of the State Department today refused to comment on them. When approached shortly before noon, Secretary of State Bryan refused to talk for publication.

University of Pittsburgh instructor will have charge of winter work of Educational Mining Men at the Association Rooms; Tuition Free is $1.

Twenty students for the Young Men's Christian Association of Pittsburgh mining class already secured, without any solicitation whatever, makes it certain that the number required by the university in order to secure the services of Professor Zimmerman will be enrolled before October 1, when the class will be organized.

The eagerness with which the young mining men have responded to the published invitation to enroll in this class is probably due to the excellent showing made by members of the class in the last state examination. Out of a class of thirteen who attended the majority of the sessions of the class, six of them were successful in passing the examination for licenses or assistant mine foremen, seven of these passing, and one other coming within one point of the passing point.

Professor Zimmerman will spend next Thursday in the Connellsville region, and in company with Secretary Bier, will visit Dunbar at the noon hour, Phillips in the afternoon, and Dunbar in the evening.

It is expected that with the larger enrollment the tuition fee of $1.00 per month will also cover the cost of the books used. The course will cover the work of firelocks, assistant mine foreman, and later in the winter that of mine foreman. This class is open to all young mining men who care to enter it, the expense being jointly borne by the Y. M. C. A., P. M. U. and the students.

A feature not included in last year's work which is planned for this year will be a series of quarterly mining institutes, at which questions of special interest will be discussed by experts in mining. These institutes will be arranged by the class.

THE PROPOSED SURVEY OF SCHOOL DISTRICT OPERATIONS

It is to be Pressed, Although No Definite Action Was Taken Last Night.

The Municipal League did not meet last evening. Owing to a lack of quorum, President W. S. Behanna was obliged to postpone what promised to be an interesting session until a future date. Despite the inability of the league to meet, however, the proposed survey of the books of the school district will not be abandoned. An effort will be made to have a meeting of the investigating committee at an early date. At this meeting the committee will be organized by the selection of a chairman, and plans will be discussed as to the best way in which to proceed about their duties.

In conducting this survey of the books, the league is not conducting an audit. President Behanna states that the investigation will merely be a survey for the purpose of ascertaining the reason for the increased expense of running the Connellsville school district over the cost of operating other public schools, when the standard of education here is not much higher. A. A. Clarke was appointed temporary chairman of the probe committee when the committee was named. His duties as chairman, however, will end when the committee is organized. As it is the intention of the league to push the survey to completion at the earliest possible date, a meeting of the committee will probably be held in a few days.

SACRIFICE SALE OF COKE

Reported at Chicago, but It Wasn't Connellsville Coke.

A veteran in the coke trade tells the Chicago Black Diamond an interesting story of how he disposed of five cars of domestic coke at sacrifice price. Somehow or other at the oven a mistake was made on one of his orders and five cars of coke were loaded for western domestic use in bulk cars, and when they arrived at Chicago, it was realized that no retail dealer was equipped to unload those cars or would care to undertake it, as most of them prefer to have the coke in gondola cars.

After strenuous efforts to sell the coke as it was shipped the veteran attempted to persuade the railroad to unload it from the rack cars into the gondola cars, but to pay all the expenses. He had one of those long, tedious journeys to make the railroad office to another until he was finally put in touch with the yardmaster, who, after yielding to many persuasions, declared that he would make every possible effort to have the commodity transferred. At the end of a prolonged period he reported back that the gondola cars were available and the work could be done, but it was absolutely impossible to find the labor necessary to make the transfer.

The veteran, consequently, in order to avoid the accumulation of demurrage, reconsidered the coke to another point and sold it at sacrifice price.

SEND COMMUNICATION TO CHIEF

Haddock Receives Letter From State Official in Which Methods for Better Fire Fighting Are Suggested; Increased Efficiency Looked For.

State Fire Marshal John L. Baldwin is sending out bulletins to the various departments of the state, calling attention to the necessity of efficiency in equipment in fighting fires to render the best service to the community. The bulletin received by Fire Chief John M. Haddock is of interest and follows in part:

"The aim of every company commander to teach the highest point of efficiency in equipment in fighting fires and render to the community the best of service. In addition to fighting fires and of equal, if not of more importance, should be the prevention of fires which would mean the saving of many thousands of dollars, and in reducing the risk of loss of life assumed by every member of a fire company when responding to a fire. Fire prevention is today recognized in many of the states as of great importance, and as a result are being formed for that purpose.

"Not to be behind other states, the State Fire Marshal would suggest and urge that the chief and individual members of every fire company in the state, become thoroughly familiar with the construction of buildings in their respective districts, by making frequent inspections of the same and report to the proper official any building or structure that by reason of its condition is found especially liable to fire and that it is so situated as to endanger other property, also, report any accumulation of trash or rubbish in or around buildings that by reason of its inflammable nature might cause fire. Interest should be taken by members of a company in knowing that their district is clean and that all fire traps and possible causes of fire are positively eliminated.

"Fire prevention should appeal to and be the slogan of every company commander along that line should be vigorously pushed. The preparedness of companies for emergencies should not be neglected, and every company, whether large or small, should have proper and full equipment for the fighting of fires; care should be given to the selection of the apparatus and particularly to the quality and care of hose. After using hose it should be thoroughly dried and placed on truck or reel so as to be in readiness for instant service when required. Use care in the selection of the thread; see that it is interchangeable with that used by other companies so that no delay may occur should occasion arise necessitating extension of line and use of hose belonging to others.

"Look into the water supply for fire purposes; see that it adequate at all times; that feed pipes are of sufficient size; that a strong pressure is maintained at all times; that when a fire occurs you will not be hampered in your efforts to save property, and be compelled by lack of water to stand aside in a helpless manner. Go over the fire plug; see that there is a sufficient number and that they are conveniently placed. Make it the duty of some particular member to frequently flush pipes and be watched in winter time that plugs do not freeze. A little attention may be the means of saving life and property that otherwise might be sacrificed by their neglect."

SEES PARENT MURDERED.

Ten Year Old Boy Witnesses Stabbing of

AT THE THEATRES.

THE SOISSON.

"Human Hearts" will be the attraction at the Soisson Theatre Monday, September 13. The story of "Human Hearts" is one of love, pathos and devotion, skillfully intermingled and set serious and sublime as the theme may be. The play contains many laudable scenes and situations, controlled by the quiet characters of Jean Mason the tramp and Mose, the faithful old negro, who bring out a smile or a good hearty laugh just at a time when some pathetic scene or line of the play is about to bring out handkerchiefs from any in the audience, and the childish logic of little Bruce Logan brings a tear one moment and a smile the next. It is such plays as "Human Hearts" that are the most successful and seemingly will live forever. A complete production is carried for the piece, the scenery being handsome and striking in appearance, making a fitting frame for the audience's story. It is promised that the production will be worthy of the play and that the performance of "Human Hearts" will be perfect in every respect. Its simple story, with its fine character contrasts, its moving incidents, its play people with those elements, which establish popular success leaving a most pleasant impression at its conclusion. It is plays of this kind that best please the general public and that is why "Human Hearts" has always been such a great success and will always be in popular demand.

"Within the Law," an intensely interesting new drama of present day New York life with a clever cast of players and a lavish production is announced as one of the most important attractions coming to the Soisson Theatre where it will be seen Friday, September 17. This play which grossly depicts a good girl's struggle in the underworld after having been unjustly sent to prison is the triumphantly successful dramatic offering of the year in both New York and Chicago.

THE COKE AND IRON TRADE.

The Daily Iron Trade is as its name implies, a publication specially representative of the iron trade. We will not assert that it has any prejudice against the coke trade, but it has any bias it is in favor of the consumer of coke rather than the producer of coke. Following editorial review of the Conneltsville coke trade is, therefore, interesting at this time.

The Conneltsville furnace coke market the past few days has developed such a variety of price rumors that any buyer or seller may feel free to take his own choice. Of course, the most of these rumors have to do with the price of prompt fuel, but in the lower quotations such as $2.45, even, and even $2.25, even, continue to be made for any length of time, they may have some effect upon the contract market, which even today appears to be firm, held at $1.50, even. It is known that some comparatively small lots of standard coke for prompt delivery have been sold around $2.35, even. It is also known that some of the coke sold at a price of less than $2.50, even, has been sold to be of a lower grade than the commonly accepted specifications for standard coke. It must be admitted, however, that most of the larger consumers of furnace coke were not so much disturbed for September delivery and a number of contracts have been made for an even longer term.

The immediate price situation threatened to become more complicated some days ago, by a scarcity of water in the regions which threatened to shut down certain works. However, the arrival of a heavy rain-fall helped some and the far-sightedness of other producers in providing their own water supply helped more, and the threatened coke shortage was averted. It appears that some of the steel works are closing down; a considerable number closed down some weeks ago. It also appears that some producers are slow to reduce their prices because of assurances that had been given to local financial interests, this entire episode being entirely a Conneltsville region matter.

All in all, the struggle of the coke producers in the Conneltsville region to maintain the price at a figure which they had set as profitable, and which they held was for the benefit of the maker, has taken on a new phase which is rapidly becoming intensely interesting to both sides. The disinclination of the pig iron market to rise from the slow appreciation to the cost line which has prevailed for some weeks, has thrown the entire coke market into such peculiar complexity as has not been witnessed in many a day. It would seem the present turn of affairs will have more of a bearing upon the general coke market after it has had a few days in which to demonstrate itself. Too, some authorities hold there is danger of a shortage in the coke supply next winter. And there you have it.

We are able to agree with the producers of our contemporary, since they state the coke situation substantially as it is presented in the Weekly Courier for a review of the current week, but we cannot follow the conclusion. We see no new phase of the situation so far as the Conneltsville merchant coke operators are concerned. They have taken the stand that they cannot cut their coke under $2.50 per ton and make a fair profit, and that consequently they will not do so. Their determination is unchanged.

Concerning the furnacemen, it is not likely that they are destined to advance their price. It is more probable that they feel they cannot do so. Nevertheless, in the absence of monopoly, prices are regulated by the inexorable law of supply and demand. If the furnacemen get a close enough together to restrict their production to the demands of the steel trade, leaving no surplus stocks to depress the market, fair prices for pig iron will come for the asking. There are indications that the iron trade is already heading that way. The progress is slow because of the reluctance of furnacemen to offer themselves as victims for the necessary sacrifice.

As noted by our iron trade contemporary, some authorities hold that there is a danger of a shortage of coke this winter. Just why is not explained. The fact will not be with the producers. If there is any scarcity of coke, it will necessarily be due to an increased demand. This may argue an increased demand for pig iron which may result in better iron prices. Many persons in the coke and iron trade look for better business during the last quarter of the year, and this hope is probably the basis of the fear of a short coke supply.

In any event, however, it is apparent that the price of pig iron will follow the example of the Conneltsville coke producers and refuse to sell below a fair profit, restricting output to meet demand. Iron can be piled up, it is true, but the process is dangerous to the producer, and it exercises a bad influence on the market.

The price of Greene county coal is even stiffer than the price of Conneltsville coke.

It is the inherent right of the House to originate revenue bills, but the Senate has amended the Democratic tariff bill almost out of resemblance probably on the ground that it isn't a revenue bill.

Through sleepers to Havana will make traveling to Cuban ports quite de luxe.

Senator Penrose is accused of being a political boss, and he has certainly been a political leader, but recent events in the Senate indicate quite clearly that he is also some statesman.

High school athletics opened promptly with the books.

The Civic League is a non-partisan organization, but of course when its officers run the membership is expected to extend the courtesy of a vote. Perhaps this is the reason there was something of a scramble for the offices when the league was formed.

The gas man is chinking up.

When the weather man invents a machine to wring out the atmosphere, citizens of the smoke-laden Conneltsville coke region will rise up and call him blessed.

Corn roads are ripe.

If Oscar Underwood goes to the Senate, as seems probable, the House of Representatives will have a Kitchen Cabinet. These cabinets have hitherto been confined to the White House.

Perhaps the hot weather has left for good.

Hoarding some other person's furniture in order to get enough money to set 'em up makes the huckster liable to be set down upon by the majesty of the law. There are second-hand seats in jail as well as in hock.

The Conneltsville Division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad is growing in importance as it grows in importance.

Stealing the registry list is a new but not a difficult political crime. It is hard to understand, however, why anybody should take the chances of going to jail that go with the act.

Even in its dry moments the Young river is not fordable with impunity. The old joke about piking it is not to be taken seriously.

Leslie Mandell, reported to be insane since being struck by a train on the West Side, should receive medical attention possibly of a surgical nature.

Kalamazoo.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Slawash."

Kalamazoo is like New York and London and Chicago and St. Petersburg and there is only one of it.

The man who invented Kalamazoo's name didn't patent it but he was safe enough. No one has stolen it. For 75 years Kalamazoo has struggled along and never had any ambitious young city snubbed it by calling itself "New Kalamazoo" or "Kalamazooville" or "Kalamazoo Center."

Thousands of people who don't know whether Kalamazoo is a breakfast food or a new kind of disease have intruded its name lovingly and have taken it home to try it on their pianolas. Everybody is familiar with Kalamazoo but few know whether it is an institution or is played like a piece of.

As a matter of fact, Kalamazoo is one of Michigan's best known cities and is not otherwise peculiar. It began life as "Bronson" in the early thirties and in a few years had become large and strong enough to bear its present name. At once the city became famous. Today Kalamazoo, who pass through Jackson, Grand Rapids and other Michigan metropolises without coming up out of their magazines to breathe, police their heads eagerly out of the car window when "Kalamazoo" is called and exclaim eagerly: "Dear me, here's Kalamazoo. Let us see if it looks like it."

Kalamazoo has 35,000 people, most of whom manufacture for a living and the rest of whom sell colored bathing capery in the favorite diversities of the farmers around Kalamazoo.

Quiet and unnoted towns should consider Kalamazoo and get a little more into their names. It is the cheapest known form of advertising.

Travelers poke their heads eagerly out of the car windows when Kalamazoo is called.

Rites for a college yell which the city's name affords. It is situated in Kalamazoo county on the banks of the Kalamazoo river and its principal paper is the famous "Kalamazoo, Kalamazoo Gazette."

SOMERSET.

SOMERSET, Sept. 12.—Elaborate preparations are being made for the entertainment of the annual reunion of Civil War veterans from all parts of Somerset county which will be held here on the 17th. Nov. 1, 1912.—"At first little red spots were seen on my arms and body. I noticed them getting larger every day. They itched me so much that I scratched myself until I bled. There were times when I stood up all night and scratched. I was troubled about three weeks, during which time I used ———, which seemed to do me no good whatever. Then, finally, I thought of trying Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. As soon as I applied Resinol Ointment I felt much relief. After using it a few times, I noticed the spots slowly fading away, and in about a month I was cured." (Signed) Adolph Schoen, 742 Shepherd Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y.

The Matter of Bathing. Cool baths suit some temperaments, and hot baths bring the best results in others. Morning baths act as a tonic for some, and the evening tub is most appropriate for others. The best thing to do is for each individual to experiment until she has found which seems to have the best effect in her own case and then abide by the rule. Don't make the rule an unbreakable one, however, or you will be laying up trouble for yourself. If you once get the shower bath habit you will never give it up, so begin tomorrow morning.

When using the regular shower be sure to protect the hair with a rubber cap. Use pure soap and warm water first; then, when all the soap is rinsed off, rub the body with a handful of sea salt. Shower again with water cool enough to give a pleasurable shock, rub briskly with a coarse towel and a moderately stiff brush and then spray the body with a lotion.

Hints For Removing Stains. Grass Stains.—Soak in alcohol. Egg Stains.—Soak in cold water. Gum Stains.—Sponge with gasoline. Fly Paper Stains.—Sponge with benzoline.

Machine Grease Stains.—Wash with cold water, ammonia and soap. Indigo or Bluing Stains.—Wash in boiling water, or boil for a few moments.

Ice Cream Soda Stains.—Sponge with gasoline or chloroform with a piece of clean white blotting paper under the cover; when dry, sponge with tepid water and rub dry (gently) with a flannel.

Wedding Presents. An interesting gift to a bride-to-be, or indeed, to any woman—is a leather glove case filled with gloves. One such case, which costs about $5, is of dark green leather. It contains a glove stretcher and a buttoner. It also contains pockets to accommodate half a dozen pairs of gloves. Another such case holds the stretcher on the cover, and this box is big enough to hold two or three dozen pairs of gloves. Nothing more acceptable as a gift could be given to any woman than a case of this sort, stocked either with new gloves, or holding only one or two pairs of attractive gloves.

THE ISLAND OF THE STAIRS

Being a True Account of Certain Strange and Wonderful Adventures of Master John Hampden, Seaman, and Mistress Lucy Wilberforce, Gentlewoman, in the Great South Seas.

CHAPTER XV.

Wherein We Are Beleguered in the Cave.

"I pointed to one tall brown man, who stood up in the bow of the nearest canoe, flourishing a broad-bladed spear. "We must hide," he said. "But where?" They will search the island. "In the treasure cave," she answered. And indeed that was the most likely spot. We had brought little with us that afternoon. I had thrust a brace of pistols in my belt, and she herself, by my advice, always carried her two small ones, and I had my sword and ax, but everything else was in the boat on the beach. For a moment I thought of running down there and getting some of our things, but as I half turned to descend the stairs she detained me, dividing my purpose. "No, no," she cried, clasping my arm with both hands. "We must make shift with what we have. Perhaps they may not discover us, and we can hide safely until they depart. Come! Let us go."

There was sense in her remarks. It might be that after performing their awful worship these most unbecoming visitors would return as they came, and by keeping closely hid we might escape an encounter with them. They would certainly find all our goods as soon as they crossed the reef and landed. But there was no help for that now. We had to make the best of a bad situation.

We turned, and ran down the path across the wall. I had forethought to enter a number of coconuts and some other fruits as we passed. I filled my own pockets, and then she made a bag out of the skirt of her dress and carried the rest. Presently I reflected that we had no need for such haste. There would be plenty of time for us to reach the cave and conceal ourselves long before they landed, so we proceeded more slowly. It was almost dark when we reached our shelter. I uprooted a small tree just as we started to climb the pile of stones, which I used as a lever to push down the heap in every direction as we climbed, so that it would be impossible for any one else to enter the cave without pulling up the stones again. We passed by the stone altar and its skeleton, crept into the inner room, hung ourselves upon the rafters, and then we waited.

In that secret and secluded shelter I thought that we were safe for the time being. Especially was I sure that they would make no effort to find us at night, as the place had evidently been some sort of a shrine. And in the morning I did not think that they would chance upon that particular cave out of the many in the coral walls without a long search, unless they had proposed coming just there for other reasons than we gave them. Even if they did stumble upon our hiding place early in the hunt, which I felt sure would be made for as soon as they discovered evidence of our presence on the island in the shape of the dingy, at least at daybreak, it would take them some time to rebuild the rock wall again, and when they did enter the outer room they would find it a matter of extreme difficulty to get into the inner chamber so long as I was there. Unfortunately we had brought no powder or ball with us. We had no means of reloading our firearms, once they had been discharged. I resolved to reserve the pistols we had for the last emergency. For other weapons I had my ax and sword, to say nothing of stones and even of the human skulls about the altar.

I have said, I think, that the inner cave was slightly damp. The dampness arose from a spring of water which bubbled away in some dark corner which we had not cared to explore. We had what provisions we had brought with us left over from our last voyage, which I had luckily procured instead of throwing it away, and an armful of coconuts and other fruit. These, however, would last us but a short while. If they could not come at us by force they could easily starve us out. Also they could, without too much trouble or danger, make themselves masters of the outer cave. Indeed, I secretly thought it would be wise for me to attempt to prevent that, and in that case they could walk up the entrance and leave us there.

promise, without more to do she nestled down and went to sleep, her head upon my shoulder.

Surely, never had man a greater compliment paid him than I by that maid that night! I sat there motionless, my bare sword at my side, listening. I could hear nothing, no sound except her soft breathing and once in awhile the sough of the night wind through the trees outside, which penetrated faintly into the cave, and at frequent intervals the cry of some night bird came to me, but there was no sound of humanity.

How long we sat there I know not. It was my purpose to keep awake the night through, and I think I must have kept awake the greater part thereof, but toward morning my head dropped back on the pile of logs, and I fell asleep. Yet I did not relax my grasp upon the sleeping figure lying upon my breast. It was she who awakened when the dim light began to sift through the narrow opening into the little cave where we sat.

"Master Hampden," she said, bending over me, having arisen without disturbing me. "It is morning."

I sprang to my feet instantly, as she shook me gently and grasped my sword as I did so, what she said she laughed.

"Why did you not awaken me?" she asked reprovingly.

"I don't know. I must have—I began in great confusion."

"You must have gone to sleep yourself," she laughed.

"I am ashamed," I replied, "that I should have failed in my duty to keep good watch. I didn't awake you when I might because you needed sleep yourself, and then, like a big animal, I went to sleep myself."

"I am glad," she said, smiling at me, and I could just see her lovely face faintly in the dark twilight of the cave. "That you did and nothing happened."

"It is just as well then," I said, smiling in turn, "we have both slept. I feel greatly refreshed."

"And I."

"Thank God!" I said fervently.

"What is to be done now?" she asked.

"First, breakfast."

I broke open a coconut with my ax. I had become expert at it, and we had food and drink in plenty and for variety some of the hard bread which still remained which I had brought with us and other fruits. I lighted the lantern for a moment and went toward the sound of the falling water. The coconut shell made an excellent cup, and I brought her enough clear, cool, sweet water to lave her face and hands. Save for the stiffness of the constrained position and some slight pain caused by the damp we were both fit for any adventure.

Well, we should have need of our strength. When we finished our meal and our refreshing ablutions, she looked at me inquiringly.

"Well, what next?"

"The next thing," said I, "is to see what is toward."

"You won't leave the cave," she said, catching me by the shoulder.

"I should find it difficult were I so minded," I answered, smiling, and thrilling to her touch again, as always. Indeed, I have never got used to it even after all these years. As I look back at it now I do not think I have ever had happier moments in my life than those in which she clung to me and was dependent upon me.

"Why not?" she asked.

"You forget that we broke down the way last night."

"But you are a sailor, you might make shift."

"Yes; but not you," I answered.

"Without me?"

"Without you I go nowhere."

She looked at me with shining eyes.

"Come," said I, "let us go into the outer room. We may find out something."

I had wound my watch in the dark and looked at it now as we came into the light. It was three bells in the morning watch, or about half after four. We went past the altar with its grim, bony circle of attendants and stared through the entrance. There was an open space in front of the cliff forty or fifty yards wide perhaps. After looking some time and seeing nothing I foolishly—and yet it would have made no difference in the end—stepped out upon the shelf which made a sort of platform in front of the cave, and I saw Mistress Lucy fearfully came with me.

We had scarcely had scarcely stepped when to our astonished surprise we heard the report of a firearm, and a heavy bullet struck the coral wall just over our heads. I had just time to mark the spot whence it came by the betraying smoke as I leaped back into the shelter, carrying my precious charge before me. I was puzzled beyond measure. I was certain that the savages in the parts of the south sea knew nothing about firearms, and I could not account for it. The shower of arrows and spears that came through the opening and fell harmlessly on the sand I could easily account for, but not that shot.

"That," said I solemnly, "was a narrow escape."

"Do these Islanders have firearms?" she said, the same thought in her mind, "I never heard of it. I cannot account for it."

"I can, though," she said. "Just before the discharge of that gun I caught the sight of a man in clothes as you wear. Could it be possible that it was some one from the ship?"

I nodded my head.

"It is quite likely," I answered.

At this moment conversation was interrupted by a hail. I heard in that lonely island my own named called.

"Master Hampden!" the cry came to me. "Will you respect a flag of truce? If so show yourself at the opening, and I shall do the same."

"Don't go," cried my little mistress, hearing all; "they are utterly without honor and—"

"I think it will be best for me to go," I said. "Stand clear so that if any treacherous movement be made I shall have space to leap backward, and meanwhile look to your weapons."

I examined my pistols and then cutting out that I would faithfully observe the flag of truce I stepped out into the open. There below me on the edge of the glade, convenient to a tree behind which he could leap, for the rascal trusted me apparently as little as I trusted him, stood the wretch, Pimball. Back of him, beneath the trees, I distinguished Gilly and a number of the crew, nearly all of them, I should judge, and back of these were massed the savages. Pimball had a white neck cloth tied to the muzzle of his gun.

"Say what you have to say and be quick about it," I said, but he looked past me and took off his hat with a profound sweep.

"Good morning, Mistress Wilberforce," he cried.

I turned in a hurry and found that she had stepped out by my side. The two of us presented a fair mark for any weapon. One might have escaped, but hardly two.

"Get back," I cried harshly.

"I stay where you are," she answered firmly. "See, I too am armed." Her little hand held a heavy pistol.

"I can talk with the two of you just as well as with one," said Pimball.

"Talk on and be brief," I returned, seeing that there was no use arguing with my little mistress.

"You have found the treasure," he began, "there is no use denying it. We have it from our savage friends that the things are there. In years gone by they sacrificed here and on the coast yonder; but for generations the island has been taboo. The white man has broken the ban and we are here to take the treasure."

"Indeed!" said I sarcastically, whereat he turned pale with anger but still mastered himself.

"We offer you," he continued, "safety. We cannot take you with us, but we will have you here on the island after we have taken the treasure, and his eyes turned from me to my companion, "If you are willing to give up the woman I will enroll you with our following and we will all get away together on the Hesperus."

"What of the ship?" I asked.

It was a hard thing to control my temper, but I wanted the information. "She was badly stove up but not entirely wrecked. We fought the savages, conquered them, and then our friend, who can navigate her in and without you for that matter and make shift to get back to the South American coast at last."

"So you offer us free passage and my share of the treasure if I will give up Mistress Wilberforce, do you?"

"That is it," answered Pimball, "Eh, mates?" whereat a deep chorus of approval came from Gilly and the men.

"And this is my answer," I said firmly, leveling my pistol at him. "Get back you villain, or you will have looked your last on life."

"But the flag of truce?" he cried, dropping his weapon.

"It is not meant to cover such propositions as yours. As for the treasure you shall have it when you can get it."

As I spoke he sprang behind the tree and unrolled to his men to fire, but I was too quick for him, and we were safely within the cave when the sound of the reports came to us.

"Now what is to be done?" said my little mistress.

"The next move," I answered, "is with them."

"Shall we go further back into the cave?"

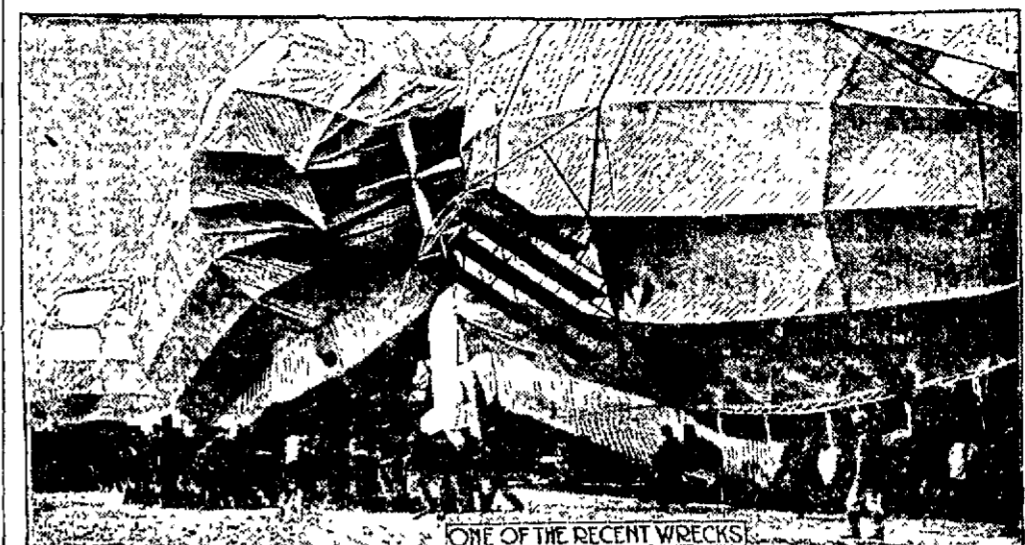

"No," I replied. "We will stay here for the present."

We were not long left in suspense, for I could hear them breaking through the woods and running toward the opening. Mistress in the way of women there were none in the cave, but I picked up a skull that lay on the floor and buried it out of the opening into the unseen crowd below. A shriek told me that I had hit some one, but I saw at once that the game was one I could not play. The white men had some skill at warfare. They had posted covering parties to protect the workmen. I crept cautiously toward the entrance, where I could see them working hard, piling up the stones to enable them to get at us, while back of them stood others with drawn bows and pointed weapons.

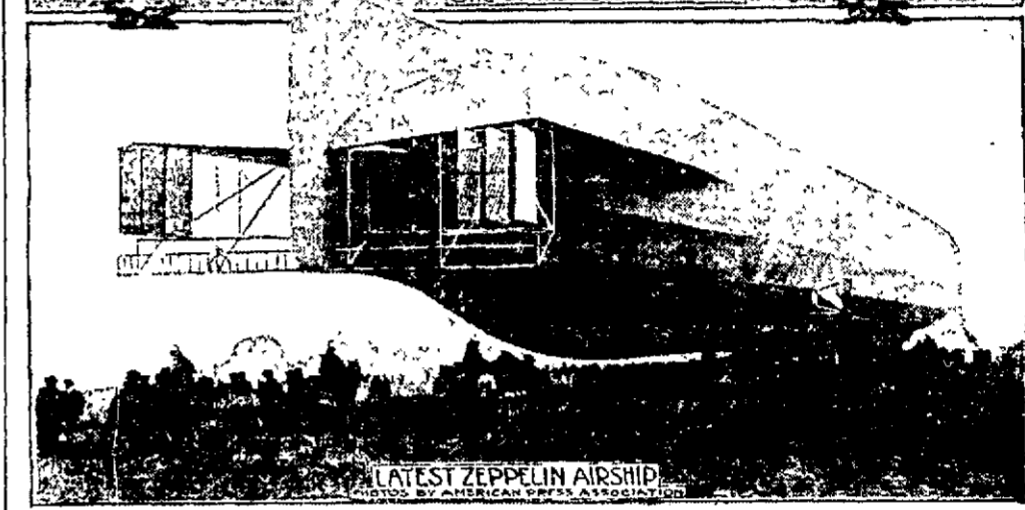

I didn't come off unscathed, for as I sprang back after having thrown an other skull and taken my look an arrow hit me in the fleshy part of the LATEST ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP.

Zeppelin Dreadnaughts of the air are in the public eye once again because of recent accidents. The first disaster to one of the famous German inventors' great difficulties in which life was lost occurred at a terrible storm, and it was the Zeppelin IV, commanded by Count Zeppelin himself, and the Zeppelin IV, were damaged during the war maneuvers in Silesia. Despite these accidents and the loss of life, the great airships have accomplished wonders for the German army and navy, and the latest disaster will not deter further development of these huge aerial boats for peace and war.

arm. My mistress noticed it instantly. The stone had broken off, and it was the work of an instant to draw out the slender wood shaft. It was not a bad wound, but it was painful. The next thing she did amazed me beyond measure, for before I could prevent it she had put her lips to the wound.

"What mean you?" I cried, when I could recover myself.

"It might have been poisoned," she said, quietly looking at me with luminous eyes, "and I cannot have you die."

I was amazed, astonished even, at her hardness in sucking any possible poison out of that wound in my arm at so great a risk to her own life. If the weapon had been envenomed, and I was most profoundly touched too. But I had had my lesson. I viewed it as done out of common humanity and to preserve a life useful to her—nothing more. Meanwhile, in my turn, I took such hasty precautions for her safety as I could. I bade her rinse out her mouth thoroughly with cold water and then with the strong spirit of which I still had in my flask.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

Exodus 20:12-21—Sept. 14.

"Thou shalt love . . . thy neighbor as thyself."

THE Ten Commandments were written upon two stone tablets.

One bore the first four commandments, appointing to God; the other, the remaining six, appointing to humanity. The essence of these last six was expressed in Jesus' words, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

Whoever loves his neighbor will not intentionally injure him in act, word or thought. Hence, Love expresses the full measure of the requirements of the Law. (Romans 13:10). Love is at liberty to do more than the Law requires, but cannot do less.

While only Christians are credited by the Lord with fulfilling the requirements of the Law—because of the allowance made for their weaknesses on account of their relationship with Christ—nevertheless the Jews and many others have been blessed in proportion as they endeavored to fulfill the Law. Hence it is wise and proper to lift high the Divine standards.

Honor Father and Mother.

All parents are deserving of consideration from their children. Yet, of course, the degree of respect must depend upon the character of the parents, to some extent. With disobedience to parents rank and rampant everywhere, it may seem a hard saying, but we believe it true, that the child's disobedience is due to the parent or the guardian.

The child may have been ill-bred, discontent and rebellious in the mother's mind during the period of gestation may have so marked the child that no amount of training may fully recover it. In such a case parents may well be patient with unhappy, disobedient dispositions in their children.

Perhaps the parents were only partially to blame. Perhaps their inability did not reach the laws of God, their human operation and the penalties of their violation, but gave downy essays and anecdotes containing neither food for the spiritual nature nor assistance in understanding and combating the human weaknesses. Perhaps the father forgot that he had a duty toward his offspring, chiefly served by assisting his wife to thoughts of kindness, gentleness, nobility, etc.

A modern writer of influence holds that Sunday Schools, while accomplishing good in one direction, have also weakened the respect of children for parents and released parents from appreciation of their parental responsibilities. One hour per week in Sunday School cannot take the place of continual parental supervision.

Statistics show that boys from sixteen to twenty years old constitute about one-third of all dangerous criminals, and that their proportionate number is increasing. Hence, honorable people should, especially, co-operate with the Divine command by encouraging obedience to parental authority.

"Thou Shalt Do No Murder."

Nothing in this command forbids the necessary killing of animals. Neither does it forbid the execution of criminals, for thus it would conflict with Divine Law elsewhere expressed, and prescribed by Divine direction.

This commandment teaches that life is to be prized, not jeopardized. Its spirit, Jesus declared, forbids an angry, murderous spirit, restrained merely by fear of consequences. This commandment makes it incumbent upon those employing labor or having supervision of others to safeguard against accidents. To allow self-interest or love of money to perpetuate dangerous conditions is to violate this commandment.

Commit Not Adultery.

One result of man's fall has been depravity of sexual appetite—unchecked, lack of self-control. These tendencies lead away from God and righteousness. The family unit of one husband and one wife, originally established in Eden, is a corner stone of righteousness in both family and national life.

"Thou Shalt Not Steal."

To steal is to take from another his possession. Some "little" forms of theft are through stock speculations, false promises, etc. Making false returns to the tax assessors is stealing. So are swindles and all forms of fraud to give or agreed upon services for wages received. But the worst form of theft is stealing another's good name, in violation of the Scriptures.

"Bear No False Witness."

Daily is the spirit of this injunction violated, not only in misrepresentation that we wish to sell or buy, but by indirect statements, by a nod, a shrug, or by silence when it is understood to mean consent.

"Thou Shalt Not Covet."

Covetousness is a heart disease which has to do with every class; for thus have their hearts in selfishness, which is covetousness. Whoever would keep the spirit of God's Law must guard against covetousness.

MESSIAH'S KINGDOM.

The Glorious Day of Divine Favor is Nearing.

The period in which sin is permitted has been a dark night to humanity, never to be forgotten; but the glorious day of righteousness and divine favor is soon to be ushered in by Messiah. He, as the SUN OF RIGHTEOUSNESS, shall arise and shine fully and clearly into and upon all, bringing healing and blessing, which will more than counterbalance the dreadful night of weeping, sighing, pain, sickness and death, in which the growing creation has been so long. "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the MORNING."

Women Work as Road Builders.

You would not think that a woman could ever outwork a man when it comes to heavy road work, but such is, nevertheless, the case in the Pullman in the construction of the Pony-Currimo road it is recalled that at one time there were approximately 500 women and girls employed daily. Notes the Engineering News—These feminine workers, receiving from 20 to 25 or 25 centavos per day, according to their strength and ability, are most efficient when materials for subgrade, surfacing or gravel and sand for concrete are to be carried a short distance.

They tie up their skirts or "bandaging" to be less hampered as they work, and wield shovels, load, carry and empty their baskets with a zeal that outshines the men.

In the construction of the subgrade of the Pony Currimo road it was necessary to haul material half a kilometer at one point. This was accomplished with women workers. Men loaded the baskets at the borrow pits. Baskets hold about one-sixteenth cubic meter and are carried on the head. On a short haul a woman will carry from a meter to a meter and a half of material per day.

As may be imagined, there is considerable talking done as the work progresses especially in the afternoon, when the women begin to tire. In fact, the noise of the women is so loud that the listener to misinterpret, but it is said that the captives (men) use some very forcible arguments to convince the women that they should talk less and work more. On concrete work women are used to advantage carrying sand, gravel and water. They are not strong enough to mix concrete for any length of time so men are employed for that purpose.
